the 1 international bestselling author of On Dublin Street is back with this witty emotional and steamy fake dating sports romance in which ambitious entrepreneur Beth Carmichael meets her match in the grumpy football captain who moves into the apartment above hers. Imagine my surprise when my new neighbor turns out to be one of Scotland's most famous and hottest professional footballers, Callan Keen. I'm even more shocked to discover that the brooding player is still holding a grudge for something that happened or didn't happen between us years ago. Too busy trying to take my social media management company to the next level, I don't have time for this gorgeous blast from the past or, at least, I shouldn't yet. Whenever I see him, I can't help but engage in a battle of wits with the grump upstairs. When a huge client opportunity arises, circumstances force me to enlist Callan's help. I require a fake date and Callan needs me to facilitate a meeting with my dad to further his own business interests. The deal between us should be simple, except of course for the blazing chemistry we've shared since the moment we met. We can't deny it, we can't control it, and soon we're agreeing to six weeks of no strings attached. Mind-blowing steamy shenanigans. I told myself I was too smart to catch feelings, but when Callan finally finds out the truth about our past, he becomes the guy I used to know, and that man is way too easy to fall for. The problem is that Callan has vowed to never let another person close enough to break his heart again. It just might prove impossible to show my stubborn Scotsman I'm worth the risk, especially when old wounds are re-opened and threaten to wreck any chance of a future together.
