according to carl jung the goal of human life is self realization we have to strive to become whole deep down we are all creative beings and we have to make use of our creativity to become what we really are. Kast explores Jung's concept of the human being and describes the path to wholeness which since Jung is known as the individuation process it becomes clear that wholeness is only possible through the interplay between conscious and unconscious. However, the two have different languages: consciousness uses word logic whereas the unconscious uses dream logic. Both languages would be forever foreign to each other were it not for symbols which mediate between the two. Our unconscious encodes its knowledge in symbols which we then have to translate into the language of our consciousness. Thus symbols are focal points of psychic development and it is through them that we can become whole human beings. Jung taught us the techniques with which we can make the creative core of the unconscious available to consciousness. Kast explains them by using numerous examples from her daily work as a therapist. She shows us how psychological problems can be overcome by working on the symbols in which they express themselves in a language that can be readily grasped by the general reader. Kast goes on to explain the basic thought of Jungian psychotherapy covering the correlation between symbols and complexes with a special emphasis on the ego complex, the healing function of the archetypes and how they appear in and interact with symbols and symbols in transference and countertransference. Powerful tools in psychotherapy. Kast also discusses the interplay of psychosomatic diseases and symbols. The dynamics of symbols is not only of immediate interest to all psychologists and their patients; it is of direct concern to everyone who has the desire to become a whole human being.

In May 1956, in his eighty-second year, Jung first discussed with Gerhard Adler the question of the publication of his letters. Over many years Jung had often used the medium of letters to communicate his ideas to others and to clarify the interpretation of his work quite apart from answering people who approached him with genuine problems of their own and simply corresponding with friends and colleagues. Many of his letters thus contain new creative ideas and provide a running commentary on his work. From some 1,600 letters written by Jung between the years 1906-1961 the editors have selected over 1,000. Volume 2 contains 460 letters written between 1951 and 1961 during the last years of Jung's life when he was in contact with many people whose names are familiar to the English reader. These include Mircea Eliade, R. F. C. Hull, Ernest Jones, Herbert Read, J. B. Rhine, Upton Sinclair and Fr. Victor White. Volume 2 also contains an addenda with sixteen letters from the period 1915-1946 and a subject index to both volumes. The annotation throughout is detailed and authoritative.

They also reveal the potential these movements hold for transforming unjust economic, social and political structures and discuss what the church at large might learn from the Pentecostal experience. Unique for its interdisciplinary approach to Pentecostal movements, this volume is important not only as a study of a significant religious phenomenon but also as a resource for reflection on Christian social responsibility in today's world. Book jacket
